

McCULLAGH CAPES VOYERS FROM REGISTRATION BOOTHS. HILL MEN WILL DIRECT DEMOCRATIC STATE CAMPAIGN.

McCullagh Deputies Challenge All Who Ask to Be Registered in Some Districts, and Consequently Make Some Amusing Mistakes.

WHOLESALE challenges by the McCullagh deputies marked the first day's registration. For a time in certain election districts of the East Side every one who attempted to register was challenged. Some were frightened away when they were told that if they persisted in registering they would have to swear to many things and have their pedigrees taken as though for the Rogues' Gallery.

There were two arrests in the afternoon. An inoffensive colored man named James Watkins said, in answer to the questions put to him, that he had voted last November in Florida. A deputy promptly arrested him on the ground that he had voted in another State within a year, and he was baled before Magistrate Meade in the Jefferson Market Police Court. He said there that it was two years ago that he had cast his ballot in Jacksonville, and Magistrate Meade let him go. Watkins's trouble came in the Twelfth Election District of the Fifth Assembly District.

Philip Cohen was arrested too, when he attempted to register in the polling place of the Fifth Election District of the Fifth Assembly District. Deputy Superintendent McCann challenged him, claiming that though he had lived for years at No. 213 Broome street, which would have brought him in the district, yet he had recently moved to No. 101 Delancey street. Cohen was taken to the Essex Market Police Court, where he was paroled until this morning.

Lodging Houses Watched.

The activity of the McCullagh men was great. It was directed principally toward the strong Democratic wards on the East Side. At the Republican County Headquarters it was said that every lodging house on the lower East Side was under suspicion, and that orders had gone out for wholesale challenges. "We can't make much of a mistake in that part of the city, can we?" was the way in which it was put.

This course of action was productive of much annoyance, and worse. None of the men wanted to submit to the indignity of having a description sent to Police Headquarters which contained his height, weight, color of hair, hair on face, marks on face, nose, complexion and other distinguishing marks.

There were some amusing mistakes, which were serious enough, too. In the Second Election District of the Sixth Assembly District, for which the polling place is at No. 51 Bowers, the McCullagh men challenged the Election Board—two Democratic and two Republican inspectors. This was a mistake, but that did not make any difference.

Voted There Twenty Years.

"Why the chairman," said big "Florie" Sullivan, "is a Yankee named John Murray, who was born within a block of the polling place and has voted in the district for twenty years. He has been on the board of five years. Murray was so mad that he voted to go to the District Attorney's office and have the deputy indicted."

Of course, he continued, "I expected that they would challenge every one that comes from No. 51 Bowers, where I live. It's nothing. I did not think that they'd go so far as to challenge everybody else in the district, though."

"Why," put in Chairman Murray, "when I came back from my lunch they were challenging absolutely every one. They said McCullagh told them to do so. I sent word to McCullagh and he said they were all wrong. The idea of me being challenged!"

Another amusing mistake was made in the Third Election District of the Second Assembly District, where John V. Walsh, a Democratic captain, who has lived in the district, at No. 42 Peck's slip, ten years, was challenged, and had to register in his district. Walsh is a customer in the Register's office. Walsh was in the district, and has lived there since. Every man from a lodging house in this district was challenged, too, necessary to give any reasons.

Registration in Ninth.

In the Ninth District, the scene of the McCann-Crocker fight, the registration anything that even that day was known. Each election district averaged ten more than the corresponding day last year brought forth. Sides claim the victory.

"Our men," said Councilman Frank Egan, "are doing better. They are registering more than enough votes to send Sheehan to Buffalo, where he came from. We don't want enough of that Goodwin registering," said Leader John G. Sullivan, "to make half a show of a matter of fact, it isn't worth counting. What's the use of anything?"

Superintendent McCullagh left his office at 10 o'clock, immediately after the polls at 10 o'clock. He went directly to his home. When seen there he said: "I have absolutely nothing to say in regard to the registration. The reports will be given out tomorrow."

Job Hedges is acting as Superintendent of the Eighth District. He particularly cautioned the voters to be on their guard against any attempt to fraud. "I have no objection to any man," he said, "prophesying a complete anti-Zammy victory."

DEWEY ARCH IN STONE

A NAVAL MONUMENT.

Committee's idea is to make it a Testimonial to America's Fighting Seamen.

The Citizens' Committee of One Hundred, formed for the purpose of carrying on the movement for perpetuating the Dewey Arch in stone, met in the St. Paul Building yesterday. William Conant Church was chosen chairman, Charles H. Neill secretary and Cornelius N. Bliss treasurer.

In opening the meeting Mr. Church said: "It is a national monument that we intend, not to be erected to the honor of a single individual only, but one that shall stand for all time as a testimony of the appreciation of the glorious deeds of the navy which Admiral Dewey represents, not the deeds of one day alone, but those that have illumined the history of our race since of Decatur and Paul Jones until now."

BOLTON HALL QUILTS INDEPENDENT LABOR TICKET.

Withdraws His Name with Sarcastic Remarks on Laws and Their Lack of Justice.

Bolton Hall, the lawyer and secretary of the new American League, who was named by the Independent Labor Party as candidate for Surrogate, has withdrawn his candidacy. His letter follows:

Hon. John N. Parsons, Chairman Independent Labor Party Committee.

Dear Sir:—I highly appreciate the honor that, as I am informed, your organization has conferred upon me by naming me for a judicial position. I am always at the service of those who create honest and true laws, and I will endeavor to do my best to see that the laws are made in the way that they are made.

But I would not wish to serve you in any connection with law, for I do not think that at present either the object or the effect of law is to do justice. Lord Coke said that the law was a machine for the creation of costs. Any lawyer who has had experience with it will bear me out in saying that civil law today is merely a game played by us lawyers for our own benefit, and under command of the machine, at the public expense. I would not wish to spend my life upholding such a game.

I take my part in the game by practicing when it is necessary, and I would accept a nomination were it required in the interest of equal rights for all. But it is not required here. Mr. Varnum would doubtless be a good surrogate in the future, as he is now, and I therefore respectfully and gratefully withdraw my name in connection with the candidacy for surrogate.

Yours faithfully,
BOLTON HALL.

IF M'KINLEY WERE CAMPAIGNING IN VERMONT!

THESE QUEER THINGS HAPPENED

'CAUSE FRIDAY CAME ON THE 13TH.

OUTSIDE of the failure in the yacht race there were other happenings in New York to prove that Friday, the 13th of the month, is unlucky. Here are a few:

Joseph Cohen, of No. 110 Forsyth street, was arraigned before Recorder Goff, charged with stealing a watch from a pawnshop on the Bowery. Three cross-eyed men had preceded him to the bar and all had been sentenced to the limit. Cohen was shaky.

"Did you steal this watch?" asked the Recorder.

"Sure on I didn't," replied Cohen. "It's a thrumped up charge, yer honor, brought by one infamously dirty thing ever I shot in my life. I'm an honest boy, yer honor."

"What did you say your name was?" "Cohen," responded the prisoner.

"Why do you call yourself Cohen?" "It's the name of the man me mother says rint to."

Cohen, whose real name is Smith, was sent to Kilmain for an indefinite spell.

John Fannessy insisted on going to trial before Recorder Goff, although his lawyer advised that he ask for a postponement. Fannessy declared that he was not superstitious. He was accused of grabbing the $8 bank roll of a friend. Fannessy believes that if he had not been a thief he could have been a great lawyer.

"I desire to state," he said, "that the testimony so far rendered is immaterial, incompetent and irrelevant. It is true that I have done time, but that is no sign that I have not been unjustly persecuted. I came before you to-day, Recorder, against the advice of my lawyer, who said that it was an unlucky day."

"I want to say that I thought this proceeding witness wanted me to take the $8. I believe in this belief, I took it. I am willing to pay it back. I think my excuse is good on Friday—the 13th—or any other day."

I guess about three years and six months will fit you all right," remarked the Recorder.

Fannessy is disposed to agree with his lawyer.

John Clancey, of No. 71 Market street, told the Magistrate in Essex Market Police Court yesterday morning that he was a member of the Delancey Street Thirteen Club, and that his membership had got him into trouble.

"It was dis day," explained Clancey. "We had a meetin' to-day night, an' some guy says dat to-morrow is Friday an' de day after dat is Saturday. I say dat it go out an' make good dat Friday de thirteenth is as good as any other day. See? So out I goes an' I say, 'me self, I will be de next I know I'm makin' a bluff an' silep in de booby hatch.'"

Two detectives from the Bowdoin street station were the complainants against Clancey. They charged him with furnishing a revolver in front of the pool room at No. 30 Central street, kept by Barnie Finkel. Frequenters of the place asserted that Clancey entered the room and stole $100 from a crowd of players at the table of a croaker.

"Ah-h-h," said Clancey, in tone of deep disgust. "dey wasn't 80 cents in de joint." Clancey paid a $5 fine, lost his revolver and went around and resigned from the Delancey Street Thirteen Club.

Louis Vilano, aged eight, did not know that he was picking out a hoodoo day when he got on roof of No. 167 and he fell yesterday morning. He had cramps, colic, gout, consumption and Bright's disease, according to his report to his mother. She gave him a dose of medicine and wrapped him up in bed.

It was not long before Louis had found his way to the roof of No. 165 Bleeker street, the tenement in which his mother lives. Between No. 165 and No. 167 is an area five feet wide. It occurred to Louis that it would be a good way to test his health to try to jump from one roof to the other over this area.

He took a good run and jumped. His feet hit the edge of the roof of No. 167 and he fell backward down the opening toward the paved court seventy feet below.

Hanging to the fire escape on the third floor was a hook such as is used in meat shops. Little Louis's leg caught in this hook and he hung suspended like a dead sheep until he was pulled off. The ambulance surgeon said that he would recover, and Louis rests content in the hospital, where he will not have to go to school for about a month. In this he has risen superior to the hoodoo of the day.

Register to-day. Polls open from 7 a. m. till 10 p. m.

INGHAM ADMITS THAT HE MIGHT BE UNTRUTHFUL.

Harvey K. Newitt, of the Accused Firm, Makes a Better Impression on the Jury.

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 13.—Former United States District Attorney Ellery P. Ingham, who, with his law partner and former assistant, Harvey K. Newitt, is on trial before Judge McPherson in the United States District Court, charged with conspiracy and bribery in connection with the Jacobus Kennedy revenue stamp counterfeiting case, to-day continued his story of his dealings with the confessed counterfeiters, and was then severely cross-questioned by District Attorney Beck.

Mr. Beck succeeded in forcing Mr. Ingham to admit that he would utter an untruth if the exigencies of the case required it. Mr. Ingham played for sympathy by referring to his long acquaintance with Mr. Beck, and at times became dramatic.

Harvey K. Newitt, a straightforward man, told of his alleged dealings with Secret Service Agent McManus. His apparently frank manner had a marked impression on the jury. The Court then adjourned until to-morrow.

MISS WILLING TO BE F. C. LAWRENCE'S BRIDE.

Their Engagement Formally Announced, as the Journal Said Early in the Season It Would Be.

Newport, R. I., Oct. 13.—Miss Susan Willing is engaged to be married to Francis C. Lawrence, Jr. She is the younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward S. Willing, of Philadelphia, and sister of Mrs. John Jacob Astor.

Mr. Lawrence's parents have lived in Grosvenor square, London, and in the South of France for many years. Mr. Lawrence's home is the Union Club, in New York. He is the most intimate friend of Barton Willing, brother of Miss Susan Willing and of Mrs. John Jacob Astor.

The engagement of Miss Willing and Mr. Lawrence was announced at a dinner here this evening. Not the engagement, but its announcement, was a surprise. Still, Edith Dyer, Jr., said: "I expected it would be made." At the beginning of the season the Journal had expressed the same idea. Mrs. Willing denied then that her daughter was to be married to Mr. Lawrence.

Mr. and Mrs. Willing hoped that their daughter might be persuaded to wait. She has beauty, grace, wit. American girls not so fascinating have captivated kingdoms, empires. Mr. and Mrs. Willing were ambitious for her. But Miss Willing has in her devotion to Mr. Lawrence the approval and aid of her brother, of Mrs. John Jacob Astor and their friends. They form a gentle conspiracy with pretty tactics against the parental severity of Mr. and Mrs. Willing.

MOTHER BELIEVES HER BOY WAS KIDNAPPED.

Jersey City Police Have Vainly Dragged the Morris Canal for His Body.

Joseph Creed, five and one-half years of age, has been missing since Monday last. His mother, Mrs. Annie Creed, of No. 667 Grand street, Jersey City, believes he has been kidnapped. On Monday a boy answering his description and who was crying was seen by a trolley motorman in the company of two men on Sound, between Henderson and Grove streets.

The police of the Fourth Precinct believe that Joseph fell into the Morris Canal, which is at the rear of his home. The canal has been dragged, but the body has not been found.

Mrs. Creed keeps boarders in the Old Bull's Head Hotel. She has been separated for about a year from her husband, Frank Creed, who lives at No. 91 Whitman street. The missing boy is strong for his age, has curly hair, and when he disappeared wore brown knickerbockers, a shirt with blue coat, knitted cap, black stockings and laced shoes.

TROLLEYS CRASH AND EIGHT ARE INJURED.

Car Laden with Excursionists Run Into by Another Through an Error in Signalling.

Syracuse, Oct. 13.—Seven women and one man were seriously hurt in a collision near Maple Bay, on the Lakeside trolley line, this morning. It was Trolley Day of the Danforth-Congregational Church and the cars were carrying excursionists.

Owing to some error of signalling a regular car and an excursion car came together head-on. Both cars were telescoped and the occupants were shaken up, eight having limbs broken and being otherwise injured.

Among the injured is Charles Lambke, of New York. He is at St. Joseph's Hospital with three ribs broken.

Elliot Danforth, Friend of Hill, Named to Direct the Democratic Campaign—McCarren and Whalen Dropped from the Committee.

Elliot Danforth selected as manager of the New York Democratic State campaign for 1899.

Richard Croker renominating Edward Murphy as the real leader of the Empire State Democracy.

The new Democratic Executive, otherwise Campaign, Committee, controlled by David Bennett Hill in the ratio of 6 to 5.

These were the chief developments in Democratic politics yesterday.

THE Democratic canvass for control of the next State Assembly and the formation of skilful lines for 1900 really begins to-day, when headquarters will be opened at the Hoffman House, over which Elliot Danforth is expected to preside. The choice of a campaign conductor was made last night, when Chairman Campbell, of the State Committee, announced the names of the Executive Committeemen, with Danforth at the head.

The chairmanship was first offered to John B. Stanchfield, who declined it. Nearly all of yesterday was devoted to trying to inwhich came from the Democratic Club last night, that he had at the State Committee meeting tendered his support to David B. Hill himself for chairman of the State Executive Committee, and he advised him to take the helm and manage the campaign. Hill, it is said, replied that he preferred to have nothing to do with managing the campaign unless substantial aid were assured by the New York City Democracy. Mr. Croker maintained that but Mr. Hill's reply is not made public.

Hill men interpreted Mr. Croker's statement in various ways. Some took upon it as meaning that Croker proposed to throw the entire responsibility upon Hill in case the Democrat should fail to secure the next Assembly. Should there be a Democratic majority, however, the New York and Brooklyn members would control and elect their own candidates for Speaker and other offices. This was one reason the Hill men said, why neither Senator Murphy nor Mr. Croker offered serious opposition to the new Executive Committee.

It was hinted at the Democratic Club last night that there might be an attempt at to-night's Executive Committee meeting to supplant Danforth with James Shevlin, of Kings, and that Colonel John F. Gregory would be thrown out of the chairmanship and Perry Belmont chosen in his stead. The Hill men say they will stick to Danforth, but may accept Belmont as treasurer.

Any election of judges is important. Many judges are to be chosen on November 7. Register to-day.

MYSTERIOUS FIRE LAYS A SILK MILL IN RUINS.

Watchman Heard an Explosion and Soon the Factory Was Wrapped in Flames.

The large plant of the Equitable silk mill at Prospect avenue and Cornelia street, in Ridgewood, on the outskirts of Williamsburg, was totally destroyed by fire yesterday morning.

The fire practically burned itself out and then there was left of the former handsome factory only a pile of ruins.

How the fire started is a mystery. When the watchman made his round at midnight everything was seemingly safe from fire. The watchman added that a few minutes before he discovered the blaze he heard a dull report as if an explosion had occurred. The total loss is placed at $50,000. The fire broke out about fifty men and women out of work.
